ZOO ATLANTA

A large image occupies the middle section of the page. On the left, a close-up of a giant panda's face is shown, looking towards the right and holding a piece of red fruit. On the right, a young girl with long brown hair, wearing a white shirt and a dark backpack, is smiling and pointing her right index finger towards the text. The background of this section is a dark blue with a repeating pattern of white triangles.

Georgia Schools Checklist: Make Sure Your Child Meets the Requirements to Attend Classes

Children enrolled in child care facilities or entering a Georgia school for the first time, including kindergarten, are required to have an eye, ear and dental exam and certain vaccines to protect against diseases such as diphtheria or measles.

Examinations and vaccinations are offered through a private doctor's office or public health clinics and are documented on the Georgia Certificate of Eye, Ear, Dental Exam (form 3300) and the Georgia Certificate of Immunization (form 3231). These completed forms must be provided by parents to the school or childcare facility for enrollment. If form 3300 hasn't been completed, parents have 120 days to submit it. Superintendents can grant a waiver for submitting form 3231, for up to 90 days, if immunizations can be completed during that period. Flu vaccines are recommended for children ages 6 months and older; ask your health care provider about getting a yearly flu vaccine to protect against flu.

Older Kids Needs Shots, Too.

Had enough immunizations? Not quite. As kids enter sixth or seventh grade, there are a few final shots they'll need.

- Tetanus, Diphtheria, Pertussis (Tdap or Dtap) – final dose required
- Varicella booster – second dose required
- Mumps – second dose required
- Meningococcal (MCV) – first of two doses – required before entering the seventh grade.
- Human Papillomavirus, a three-dose series, not required but recommended

Did You Know?

- Georgia law requires students to attend a public or private school or be home-schooled from ages 6 to 16. Public kindergarten is available, but not mandatory.
- Students enrolling in Georgia public schools for the first time will be asked to provide a Social Security number, but it is not required and parents can decline to provide it.
- A child must be 5 years old on or before Sept. 1 to enter public kindergarten.
- A child must be 6 years old on or before Sept. 1 to enter first grade.
- Georgia provides a public pre-kindergarten program for children 4 years old on or before Sept. 1, administered by Bright from the Start: Georgia Department of Early Care and Learning.

Helping Your Child Succeed in School

Doing well in school isn't only about how hard you study. Here are some ways that you can support your child's learning at home.

■ Get involved in your child's school.

Join the PTA and other school groups. Volunteer whenever you can. Your child will feel more connected to school when you show you care. Being an active parent also helps you get to know the administration and faculty, which can be helpful if you ever have questions or concerns.

■ Get to know your child's friends.

Your child may not share much about the school day, but pals can be fountains of information. This also allows you to ask your child more personalized, thoughtful questions about his day. What did you and Jason talk about at lunch? How was hanging out with Reese and Morgan at recess? Showing you know about his friends and asking specific questions can help him open up more or jog a memory from the day.

■ Know her schedule and the pressures lurking.

In elementary school, most teachers send weekly emails about things coming up at school. Older kids likely have an agenda – whether hard copy or digital – to keep up with assignments, homework and upcoming assessments. Check in with your child about anything she might be stressed about or want help with; be especially sensitive to her feelings around test time.

■ Consider limiting extracurriculars to one or two a week.

You know how exhausted you are running your child around. Just imagine how tired he is! One idea is to have an activity that can happen year-round like playing an instrument, dance, chess or karate and then to have seasonal activities that rotate like soccer, baseball, volleyball or basketball.

■ Go over her homework with her.

Some children need a little downtime before diving right into the books. Others need to jump in right away. Regardless, make sure she understands finishing her homework is a priority. You can also use the review time as a way to check in about how she's feeling about the subject matter.

■ Make sure he reads every day.

Or make time to read to younger children. For older kids, ask a few questions about what they are reading to be sure they are understanding the book appropriately. Even 20 minutes a day can make a big difference in academic success.

■ Make sure she gets enough sleep.

Many physicians believe that kids need 10 to 11 hours of sleep a night well into their teen years. Turn off computers, cell phones, and TVs at least an hour before bedtime to allow children's brains time to slow down. Schedule a bed time that makes sense based on when your child has to get up in the morning.

■ Talk to your child about drugs, alcohol, bullies, peer pressure, guns, strangers.

As hard as these conversations are, your child needs to know how to respond when confronted with danger. Have age-appropriate conversations and let your child know that he can come to you with any questions or concerns.

■ Keep tabs on the electronics.

Today's kids may be technologically savvy, but many still do not understand the consequences of viewing – or sending – inappropriate material and texts or connecting with individuals they don't personally know. Be sure electronics have the proper parental controls and that they are kept in a shared public space overnight.

■ Celebrate accomplishments, no matter how small or big!

Positive reinforcement is a great motivator for maintaining effort. We all feel better when we know our hard work is paying off. Hugs, extra minutes of outside or technology time, notes of encouragement, and making a favorite meal are all great ways to show how proud you are.

7 Simple Tips for Finding the Perfect Preschool

by Rebecca Hastings

It can be hard to think about your child spending time away from you, but preschool is an important step for social development, early learning and creating a community for your child. When you start your search, finding a the right preschool may seem stressful but when you focus on a few key elements, you can find the perfect place for you and your kids.

Here are 7 tips to help you find a preschool you'll treasure:

- 1 Talk to kids. At the park, at the library, at your friend's house. Find out what the kids loved doing on a given day or what their favorite thing is about preschool. Ask to see their latest project. Most kids will be thrilled to share their expertise. You can learn a lot from kids if you pay attention.
- 2 Talk to parents. See what schools they love and why. Find out if they are friends with other families there. Ask about the teachers that make it great. The most important thing is to talk to real people. Don't rely on social media for accurate information.
- 3 Consider the schedule. Does the school have a schedule that works for your family? It is essential that the days and hours align with your family schedule and your child's preferences. There are schools with two-day-a-week programs and schools that meet five days a week. Some meet for two hours while others are the whole day. Think about what you and your child would benefit from most.
- 4 Ask about educational philosophy. Every school has a unique approach. Some schools focus heavily on academics while others focus on social skills. Some schools stress nature-based learning while others focus on the arts. Don't get caught up in what these approaches are called; think about your child and how their interests line up with what the school offers.
- 5 Talk money. Consider tuition costs as well as extras like fundraisers, field trips and parties. Be bold about asking these questions before you choose a school, so you are not stressed later about unexpected expenses. Finding a school that your family can afford will create a less stressful environment for you and your child.
- 6 Find out about parent involvement. Ask how much parents are expected to be involved and make sure it is something you are comfortable with. Some schools ask for parents to volunteer during the school day on a regular basis while others only invite parents for holiday and year-end programs. Extras like fundraising or events can also be a requirement.

- 7 Ask to observe. See if there is a good time for you and your child to visit during the school day. Watching the school in action is one of the best ways to discover if it will be a good fit. Chat with some parents at drop-off or pickup. Observe the kids as they work together. All of it fits together to create the atmosphere your child will be learning in.

Finding the perfect preschool doesn't have to be stressful. Be realistic about your family's needs and how they match up with the school. With these simple tips, you can discover a learning environment that will suit your child and family.

Get Ready for Preschool

Prepare for preschool and reinforce curriculum at home with these tips.

- Get Moving: Goal-oriented play encourages children to exercise and triggers the movement of muscles. Have your child play games, stack blocks or catch a ball.
- STEM Work: Science, Technology, Engineering and Math education creates critical thinkers and increases science literacy. In the kitchen, discuss the purpose of certain ingredients, such as baking powder. Encourage building with LEGOs or marshmallows and toothpicks.
- Keep Spelling: You may have already started teaching your child to spell his name, but do this with everything: items at the store, in his room or outside.

- Write and Color: Let them go wild coloring animals, shapes, letters or anything they can imagine. This encourages creativity and helps improve fine motor skills. On drawings, write the word the image conveys.
- Practice Counting: Set up a sensory bin at home with a variety of colored items, and use rice or beans as filler. Ask your child to find the red items and count them, then the blue items, then the green and so on. While grocery shopping, encourage counting of vegetables or fruit in the cart, or when eating, count pieces of food.
- Learn with the Five Senses: Teach about touch by spraying shaving cream on the table and letting kids trace shapes using their fingers. Taste test different types of yogurt. Play I Spy in the backyard. Print out pictures of animals and mimic their sounds.
- Read Daily: Have books in an easy-to-reach part of your child's room, so they can see the covers. Let them pick the book each night. Read aloud and trace along the words with your finger, stop to ask questions.
- Pretend Play: Have a day to "play school" and talk to your child about preschool. You can play teacher, sing songs, read books about school and practice putting on a coat or tying shoes. When your child has already started school, have them play teacher to tell you what they learned in school.

Top Reasons Parents Opt for Private Schools

Ask parents why they want their child to attend a private school, and you'll hear these responses:

Individualized Attention: With smaller teacher-to-student ratios than most public schools, many private school parents believe their children get a better education at an independent school.

Religious Principles: Many parents want an education that offers religious teachings and tenets along with the ABCs. They seek an emphasis on spiritual values, morals and faith development throughout the whole curriculum.

Personalized Learning: Every child has his or her own academic timetable, as well as talents. Parents may find that a private school can better address the child's needs – whether he or she is a late-bloomer, gifted in math, a budding artist or proficient in foreign languages.

Innovative Teaching: Some parents may have strong feelings about teaching methods or the curriculum and textbooks used by a public school system. Private schools often offer more options and flexibility. One parent may request a more innovative approach for their child, while another might demand more traditional teaching techniques.

Nontraditional Groupings: Many private schools offer alternatives to the usual grade groupings. These frequently cater more to individual abilities in different areas, or they may allow students more fluid movement between grades, regardless of age.

More Responsive to Parents: Private schools answer to the parents funding them. As a result, parents feel more confident that the issues and concerns that are important to them will be addressed.

Special Needs: A child with a learning disability or a behavioral problem may not do well in a traditional public school classroom. Private schools, especially those designed for a specific learning disability or special need, employ teachers and other professionals with the necessary credentials to teach and care for children with special needs.

– Elizabeth Baggett

To-Do List for Choosing a Private School

- DO be realistic. There is no perfect school or one-size-fits-all academic setting. Look for one that is the best fit for your child.
- DO make a list of what you want in a school. Be specific and prioritize your list.
- DO consider your child's needs. Choose one that will foster his strengths, weaknesses, interests and talents.
- DO consider your child's learning style. Is he self-motivated or does he need a structured environment? Is he an auditory, visual or kinesthetic learner?
- DO choose a school that matches your family's values.
- DO make a list of schools in your area that are potential candidates. Call and ask for information to be sent. Then make an appointment to further investigate those schools that meet your criteria.
- DO consider a school, even if it is out of your price range. Many schools offer financial aid or scholarships, so don't be afraid to ask.
- DO consider commute. A drive as far as 30 minutes or an hour is okay if everything else matches up. Look for someone to carpool with or use the drive to study or spend quality time together.
- DO visit the school. You will get a better idea if this is the right environment for your child once you step onto the campus.
- DO talk with the principal or school administrator. Ask specific questions and be realistic and honest in telling him or her about your child's strengths and weaknesses.
- DO sit in on the classes and observe how the students and teachers interact.
- DO meet the teacher who would be teaching your child. Consider how your child will interact with him or her.
- DO keep a written record of what you observe, particularly if you are visiting more than one school.
- DO look for a school where the teachers work to build a relationship with the students and their families. This is one of the biggest factors in a child's academic success.
- DO talk with other parents whose children currently attend the school to find out what they do and don't like about the school.
- DO take your child to visit the school once a decision has been made. If possible, let him meet the teacher and other students and sit in on the class. Then ask him for his feedback.
- DO follow your instinct. You know your child and family situation better than anyone else.

The Atlanta Speech School is uniquely driven to helping every child find their voice. Composed of three preschools and a K-6 elementary school for children with dyslexia, the Speech School's mission is anchored in literacy. At each of the preschools, children play to learn in environments centered on close relationships and the construction of the deep reading brain, beginning with pre-literacy skills.

The Katherine Hamm Center Preschool provides listening, spoken language and pre-literacy learning for children who are deaf or hard of hearing. Kenan Preschool guides language-centered learning so typically developing children are exceptionally prepared for school. Stepping Stones Preschool maximizes the potential of bright students with speech and language needs through an intentional, multisensory approach.

And for elementary-aged children, the Wardlaw School serves children from kindergarten through sixth grade with dyslexia, so they can go on to excel in the school of their choice, and life beyond. Through deep reading, we become who we are meant to be.

The latest cutting-edge research is tailored to each student's individual needs, so that every child has the opportunity to become who they are meant to be.

Where each child finds their voice...

Katherine Hamm Center is for children who are deaf or hard of hearing, and develops language and pre-literacy through written and spoken language in family-centered programs for children from birth through pre-K.

Anne and Jim Kenan Preschool is for preschoolers who are ready to form a pre-literacy foundation. Kenan teachers prepare children for all subjects in a setting that is at once engaging and rigorous.

Stepping Stones is for preschool aged children who have early speech and language delays. Stepping Stones focuses on ensuring each child has access to literacy and the chance to experience their full potential.

Wardlaw School serves K-6 elementary aged children with dyslexia through individualized, science-informed language and literacy instruction. Wardlaw students advance to excel in other accelerated schools.

...so they are free to become who they are meant to be.

Bringing out the brilliance of the dyslexic learner since 2012.

GRACEPOINT, a private, Christian school, proudly celebrates ten years of equipping dyslexic students in grades 1-8 with the skills needed to become independent, confident learners. Since opening its doors in 2012 with four students, GRACEPOINT has restored hope to more than 230 dyslexic learners by identifying its students' strengths while remediating their academic weaknesses. GRACEPOINT understands that dyslexia is not a disability but a learning difference viewing dyslexia as a gift to embrace and celebrate. The teaching style meets academic and spiritual needs while bringing out their students' God-glorifying brilliance.

As an accredited program through the Academy of Orton Gillingham Practitioners and Educators, GRACEPOINT provides an explicit, systematic, and multisensory approach to learning woven into all subject areas. Their mission is to equip students with the skills needed to develop into independent and confident learners. Once remediated, students transition to traditional public and private schools.

To further meet the immense need for specialized education for dyslexic learners in the community, GRACEPOINT will relocate to a larger facility located at 1407 Cobb Parkway in January 2024.

Developing students of honor, faith, and wisdom with the character and intellect to thrive in learning and in life.

The Lovett School is a community of belonging that develops students of honor, faith, and wisdom with the character and intellect to thrive in learning and in life. Founded in 1926 by Eva Edwards Lovett, Lovett continues today as an Atlanta independent school serving children from Kindergarten through Grade 12.

The School's emphasis on the whole child is nationally recognized and provides integrated experiences in academics, arts, athletics, and service through an education grounded in learning, character, and community. Lovett's rigorous academic offerings are complemented by dynamic arts classes taught by working artists, a competitive athletics program fielding 69 teams in 16 sports, and purposeful civic engagement opportunities to foster responsible global citizens.

With a student body composed of 1,640 students from 78 different zip codes, Lovett fosters inquisitive minds as well as joyful spirits, strong bodies, good characters, and empathetic hearts. Nurturing relationships are at the heart of a Lovett education, whether it be in the classroom, on the stage, or on the field, so the School maintains a student-teacher ratio of 7:1.

Learn more about Lovett and the admission process at lovett.org.

Our students find joy and purpose in learning by doing.

Guided by our distinctive approach to whole child education, Lovett faculty immerse students in intellectually rigorous, hands-on learning environments that spark character development, individual passions, and social awareness. By design, we offer students the experiences that deepen their cognitive, emotional, and social skills while inspiring an enduring enthusiasm for learning.

Mount Paran Christian School exists to provide a stellar academic experience in a Christian environment. It's crucial to guarantee a moral and faith foundation through everything your child learns at school. Through curricular Bible classes, weekly chapel, discipleship groups, and service, faith becomes integrated into who they are. Within small class sizes, MPCS offers 56 AP/honors courses, instructional support, robotics, Spanish and STEAM starting in PK3, and a 1:1 device program. MPCS's job is to prepare servant-leaders – in the classroom, on the ball field, on the stage, and ultimately in the community.

Mount Paran Christian School is a PreK3-12th grade private Christian, non-denominational, college-preparatory school. MPCS is committed to excellence in academics, award-winning arts, and championship athletics. Founded in 1976, MPCS is fully accredited (SAIS/Cognia) and located in the shadow of Kennesaw Mountain on a 68-acre collegiate-like campus. MPCS unites with home and church to prepare servant-leaders to honor God, love others, and walk in Truth. NCCS combines academic excellence with an authentic Christian education, helping students grow into their full potential in Christ.

North Cobb Christian School partners with parents of over 1,150 students in preschool K3 - 12th grade to inspire the pursuit of wonder, safeguard innocence, and discover the truth of God. This is school ... the way it should be. Since its founding in 1983, NCCS remains true to the calling of providing an authentically Christian, academically excellent education that honors each student's unique genius. Students thrive amidst a strong family culture with a 10:1 student-to-teacher average ratio.

Limitless opportunities to shine include 54 championship-caliber athletic teams, 17 award-winning arts ensembles, 5 Academies (magnet programs), and a robust array of clubs and enrichment programs. Proactive college counseling results in top scholarships and a 100% college acceptance rate. Plus, weekly chapel, discipleship groups, fall retreat, and Spring Term trips encourage solid biblical foundations. Pace develops children's passions and strengths through academics, athletics and the arts, while providing global perspectives in the classroom and an integrated experience after the bell rings.

Through the Isdell Center for Global Leadership (ICGL), Pace students come to view the world through a global lens. The ICGL builds on an innovative academic curriculum and explores an annual, school-wide theme. Curricular and co-curricular activities, scholars in residence, fellowships, internships and international study tours support education around these themes.

Through the ICGL, Pace students, guided by an outstanding faculty, develop a deep understanding of the world and the people around them. Pace graduates realize that true success means making a difference.

Wesleyan strives to provide students with an atmosphere that is challenging, reinforces the value of hard work, and emphasizes character and integrity above accomplishment.

Wesleyan School believes faith and intellect are great partners with each other. At Wesleyan, it's not a matter of choosing faith or intellect, but rather using both to create the best possible education for your child. The leadership and faculty work to provide students with an atmosphere that is challenging, reinforces the value of hard work, and emphasizes character and integrity above accomplishment.

Wesleyan School has made a commitment, in the midst of a rapidly changing culture, to never waiver on the core principle of dedication to Jesus Christ. This is at the heart of everyday life at Wesleyan as students learn and faculty strive to model the school J.O.Y. motto – Jesus, others, and then yourself.

Enrolling grades K-12, Wesleyan School prepares students for each stage of life and provides them the opportunity to see all the possibilities that lie before them. Located just outside of I-285 in Peachtree Corners, Wesleyan offers bus routes throughout the metro Atlanta area. 2023: School Tours and Open Houses

If you're considering a private school, connecting with the school's students and professionals by attending a school tour or an open house are wonderful ways to see if the school is the right fit for your child. Many metro Atlanta schools offer private tours, virtual tours, live video conferences, phone meetings and smaller open houses.

■ Start by doing your research.

Narrow down the options until you have a short list of schools that seem the best for your child by looking at websites, FAQs, pre-recorded videos and social media pages.

■ Create a list of questions you plan to ask each school. What questions do you or your child have that you can't find answers to on their website? Responses can help you narrow down or rank the school options that you're interested in.

■ Schools may have different options that you can register to attend, with each session being important for different reasons. Pay attention to the options offered, so you can decide what makes the most sense for you to attend. Sign up for a phone conference, and if you decide your family is still interested in the school, register for a campus tour.

■ At a tour, whether it's virtual or in-person, expect to tour the school, learn more about the community, talk to school professionals, and ask questions.

■ At an open house, plan to hear words of welcome from administrators and a plug from the PTA. Schools usually include a brief school history, an educational philosophy, a mission statement and a list of extracurricular activities or clubs. This overview period is a good time for parents to ask about the bus schedule, school lunches, physical education requirements, dress code and more.

■ After the school session, look at SAT scores, attendance records and grade-point averages. Follow up with phone calls and emails if you have questions.

■ If it's not part of the tour, schedule a time to observe a class in session. This will give you a good idea of the teaching style and classroom setting. Are the desks arranged in groups or in rows facing the teacher? What materials does the classroom have for the students? Are the students enthusiastic about learning?

■ Talk to other parents about the school. Most parents are happy to share their thoughts.

■ Some schools offer programs that allow you and your child to learn more from a student's perspective. If not, ask administrators if they can connect your child with a student at the school.

■ Look at the big picture. You may be hoping to stay with the system through high school, so research graduation and college placement rates. This information is usually found on the school's website.

How to Help Your Child Create and Achieve Goals

by Cheryl Maguire

“I want to be on the honor roll.”

“That sounds like a great goal. Let’s talk about how to achieve it.”

Setting goals are important because it will help children to be successful in school, work or any area of their life. The founder of JCPenney said, “Give me a stock clerk with a goal and I’ll give you a man who will make history. Give me a man with no goals and I’ll give you a stock clerk.”

Here are some tips to help your child to formulate and reach their life aspirations. These examples are related to school, but your child could create goals for sports, social skills, jobs or any other area of their life.

Motivation to Achieve Goals

Before creating goals, ask your child what their motivation or reasons for wanting to reach those goals. This will help them to stay focused and overcome obstacles. For example, if their goal is, “To be on the honor roll” and their motivation is, “To help me get into a good college” you can use this concept to remind your child why achieving these goals is important. Using pictures or images as a sign of your motivation can help them to stay focused. In this example hanging a picture of a college campus on the wall would help your child to visualize it.

How to Create Goals

Edwin Locke researched goal setting for over 40 years. He found that people who form specific goals had greater achievements than people with non-specific goals.

When creating goals it is important to have the goal be specific, measurable and realistic. Using these three criteria will increase the likelihood of success. Here are some examples:

■ Vague vs. Measurable Goals

Example of Vague Goal: I want to get good grades.

Example of Measurable Goal: I will hand in my homework on time every day for one week.

With the first example, it will be difficult to know if achieving your goals since you didn’t define what “good” means. Does good mean receiving a C or an A grade? Is it for all subjects? Do you want to get these grades for one or two terms or a final grade?

In the second example, a time frame of one week is defined so that at the end of a week you know if you achieved your goal if you handed in all assigned homework.

■ Unrealistic vs. Realistic Goals

It is also important to aim for realistic and achievable goals in order to avoid disappointment. It is easier to begin with small goals instead of large ones.

Example of Unrealistic Goal:
I will get a score of 100 on every test this year.

Example of Realistic Goal: I will earn honor roll at the end of term one.

Of course, some students might be able to earn 100 on every test, but most students would be setting themselves up for failure if they attempted this goal.

In general, it is easier to start small and work your way up to larger or more ambitious goals. Also if you write down your goals and put the list of goals on your wall, you are more apt to follow through on a daily basis.

■ Long-Term vs. Short-Term Goals

Your goals can be both long-term (1 year or longer) and short-term (1 day to 11 months). First, you can define your long-term goals and then your short-term goals as steps to help you achieve your long-term goals. By creating short-term goals you will find your long-term goal to be more manageable.

Here is an example:

■ Long-Term Goal: At the end of this year's school year, I will earn honor roll.

“Give me a stock clerk with a goal and I’ll give you a man who will make history. Give me a man with no goals and I’ll give you a stock clerk.”

■ Short Term Goal: I will hand in homework every day this week.

■ Short Term Goal: I will study and review classwork for one hour every day this week.

It may be overwhelming to think about an entire school year, but if you consider the shortest-term goal of only one hour per day it is more manageable and achievable.

Reasons People Fall Short of Their Goals

The three main reasons I have seen why students have difficulty in achieving their goals are:

- The student experiences an obstacle and instead of overcoming the obstacle, they give up.
- The student didn't know when they achieved their goal since the goal was vague.
- The student created unrealistic or unattainable goals.

Create New Goals if Necessary

If you don't achieve your goals, first figure out the issue. Then you can create new goals or find the motivation to overcome the obstacle. Sometimes only minor changes are necessary.

For example:

■ Goal: I will receive a grade of an A in term one in math class.

■ Short Term Goal: I will complete homework every day.

■ Obstacle: Current average in math class is a B.

■ Solution: Discuss with the teacher ways to improve the grade such as extra credit or staying after school.

When your child achieves their goals, praise them for their accomplishments and their ability to set a goal and achieve it. Creating goals is a lifelong skill that will help your child work harder and be more successful in life.

Special Needs Schools: Finding the Right Fit

Education for children with special needs presents challenges that often can be hard to navigate. With hundreds of programs to choose from and various therapies to think about, how do you know which decision is best for your child? When choosing a school for your child with special needs, whether public or private, here are some questions to think about:

- How is the school organized into departments? Is it by age, ability or subject groups?
- How does this change as my child gets older?
- How many staffers are there in the school?
 - a. teaching
 - b. non-teaching/support staff
 - c. employed to work with children with special needs
- What will the school do to make sure that all the staff knows about my child's individual needs?
- How many children will be in my child's class?
- How will the other children be helped to understand my child's special needs?
- How will my child be helped to make friends?
- When and how often are children taught out of the classroom?
- How does the school arrange extra support for children who need it?
- How does the school help children learn how to behave and make the school a happy place?
- How will my child be encouraged to take part in out-of-class or out-of-school activities such as clubs or sports events?

- How does the school deal with bullying?
- How is the children's work assessed for progress?
- What happens if the staff feels my child is not making adequate progress?
- What should I do if I feel my child is not making progress or if I have any concerns?
- How does the school make sure that all children have equal opportunities to take part in school trips?
- How often are written reports sent home?
- How will I be involved in the individual planning for my child's special educational needs?
- How will I be kept up to date about what is happening in school? Does the school produce a regular newsletter?
- What health or medical facilities does the school have?

- How will my child get to know the school routine, especially in the first few days after starting?
- How will the school make sure my child has the chance to take part in all areas of the curriculum?
- Are all the areas of the school accessible to my child or will adaptations be necessary?

Field Trip!

Reinforce Educational Concepts by Taking a School or Family Field Trip

Plan Ahead

- Pick a destination that fits the area of interest you plan to explore.
- Schedule the trip as far in advance as you can. Some venues offer group discounts, so ask how many you need in a group to qualify. For popular destinations, visits made early in the week will be less crowded.
- If you're taking a group, talk with your guide in advance to tailor the visit to your group's interests.
- Make sure you have enough chaperones for your group – a good ratio is one adult per five children – and make sure the chaperones know the itinerary, have a list of each child's name and a list of the items each child should see, and they know where and when to meet if the group splits up.
- If taking a large group, outfitting the kids in their school shirts or fluorescent T-shirts will help chaperones keep track.
- Before the field trip, gather information from the destination's website, read books, watch videos or take virtual field trips. Make sure the kids have a good basic knowledge of the place they'll be visiting and why they'll be there.

The Big Day

- Be prepared for the weather and pack appropriately, whether it's an umbrella, sunscreen and towels, or gloves and a warm coat. Be sure each child has comfortable walking shoes.
- Bring extra cash and stash it separately from your purse or wallet, in case either is lost or stolen.
- Make sure each child eats breakfast, but bring portable healthy snacks for later in the day, such as boxes of raisins.
- Add a little fun - and educational value – to the trip by asking each child to complete an activity during the visit. At Zoo Atlanta, for instance, they could keep track of how many newborn animals they see.
- Make sure each child knows his contact information (phone numbers, where parents work), or chaperones have a contact list.
- Emphasize that children need to stay together as a group, and tell them what to do if they get separated.
- Sing songs on the way to the location to set the mood. "Old McDonald Had a Farm" is a natural for a visit to a farm.

Four Tips for Field Trip Success

- Make sure everyone wears nametags, even the teachers and chaperones.
- Use the buddy system. Make sure everyone in the group sticks to their assigned partner.
- Schedule out the day. Keep it moving – kids are less likely to get in trouble or wander around if they're occupied!
- Set some ground rules for behavior and make sure everyone knows the consequences of misbehaving.

The Days After

- Discuss what you've seen and how it relates to your community or how an event in history shaped the children's lives today.
- If your group had its own guide or got other special treatment, be sure to thank the venue that provided it. Writing a thank-you note to your guide or the organization teaches children etiquette.
- Kids often get more interested in a subject after a field trip. Be sure to follow up with more information and activities related to the trip.

i talk
they hear you®

START TALKING BEFORE SHE HEADS OFF TO SCHOOL.

It's never too early to have a conversation about alcohol and other drugs.

The sooner you talk about the dangers of underage drinking and substance use, the greater chance you have of influencing your child's decisions about using alcohol and other drugs. For tips on how—and when—to begin the conversation, visit
