Finding the Right Camp

The following information will help you as you start your search.

■ Overnight Camp

Most offer a variety of programs for children starting at age 7. Overnight camp options include coed, single sex and specialty camps that focus on a particular program and have varying overnight accommodations, such as cabins, tents and tepees.

■ Day Camp

Similar to overnight camps, these camps take younger children, starting at age 4, and everyone returns home at the end of the day.

■ Specialty Camps and Programs

Campers can embark on adventures as varied as learning how to ride a horse, water ski or dance. If your child has a special interest, there is likely a camp that specializes in it.

■ Campers with Special Needs

A physical, medical or mental disability is not a roadblock to a camp experience. Each year more than 1 million children with special needs benefit from summer camp. Some camps specialize in serving certain groups while other camps integrate campers with special needs into the total camp population.

Asbury Hills Camp

■ Session Lengths Vary

Children may stay at camp for few days, a few weeks or the entire summer. With camp, there's a session length for every child, budget and schedule.

■ Cost

Camp remains a very affordable option for most everyone. Fees can range from $15 to $120 per day, depending upon the choice of camp, the facilities offered and the camper's needs. Many camps and other organizations offer financial assistance based on need.

Valley View Ranch Equestrian Camp

Camp Facts & Stats

56% of all campers are girls.

Camps employ an estimated 1.2 million adults each year to work in a variety of positions.

In 2023, 78% of U.S. public schools provided summer programming to help students academically.

Camp directors report adding adventure camps, family camps, nature programs, gardening, cooking from camp gardens, wellness/fitness and STEM programs.
